SPECIAL NOTICES.

DR. COSE'S APPOINTMENTS.

DR. COSE has visited Urbana about eight years, and may be expected at his office at the following times and places:

In Urbana, at the Exchange Hotel, on Wednesday, Nov. 13; Dec. 18; Jan. 22; Feb. 26; April 1; May 6.

In Springfield, at the Wells House, on Thursday, Oct. 16; Nov. 11; Dec. 18; Jan. 22; Feb. 26; April 1; May 6.

In London, at the Philo House, on Friday, Oct. 11; Nov. 15; Dec. 20; Jan. 24; Feb. 28; April 3; May 8.

Dr. Cose has now practiced at the above places for eight years, and he has a large number of patients; but after that time he will not practice at any of the above offices for some months, and he may be disappointed in his patients.

Dr. Cose cures all forms of Chronic Diseases, as Dyspepsia in all its various varieties; all diseases of the Lungs and Air Passages, as Croup, and Consumption; all diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder, Prostate, and the Glans; all diseases of the Heart, Blood, and Blood Vessels, all diseases of the Brain and Nerves, as Epilepsy, Chorea, St. Vitus Dance, Neuralgia, Palsy, and general nervous debility; all diseases of females, enlarged uterus, and all forms of Scarcities, as also all diseases of the Eye and Ear; and all other Chronic Diseases. No charge for consultation, but cash for medicines. He is not to delay your application too long. 223-11.

DR. TUCKER'S VISITS.

Dr. Tucker may be consulted at Urbana—Waver House, Nov. 14th, Jan. 4th, Feb. 20th, April 9th, May 21st.

Spencer House, Nov. 15th, Jan. 5th, Feb. 21st, April 10th, May 22nd.

He will cure every case he promises to treat Consumption, Bronchitis, loss of voice, Sore Throat, Dyspepsia, Liver Disease, Kidney, Bladder, and Urinary Complaints, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, Sick Headache, and Female Diseases, with wonderful success. Let no one despair of a cure till they have consulted Dr. Tucker.

Dr. Tucker has had more experience and better success in curing ALL CHRONIC and obstinate diseases than any doctor in the West.

Ten years of successful business on one circuit is, or ought to be, sufficient to convince all who need medicine and wish to be cured, that they had best consult Dr. Tucker at once.

Select Poetry.

We publish the following beautiful and choice poetical effusions, which we take from the "Minnie Gilmore." (We don't know whether it is her real or a fictitious name, a contributor to the "Telegraph," and it may well be said, that it emanated from a pure and incorruptible mind, as none other could write so elegant and choice—and yet so seemingly simple. In brief it is the essence of purity.)

A PRAYER.

BY MINNIE GILMORE.

Oh! let me not
Fall faint and weary by the way,
But may I kneel and humbly pray,
And know that night will bring day.

Oh! let me not
Fall faint and weary by the way,
But may I kneel and humbly pray,
And know that night will bring day.

Oh! let me not
Fall faint and weary by the way,
But may I kneel and humbly pray,
And know that night will bring day.

Oh! let me not
Fall faint and weary by the way,
But may I kneel and humbly pray,
And know that night will bring day.

A Brace of Love Stories.

MODE OF PROPOSAL.

There seems to be other ways of getting a wife besides advertising for one.

A young lady in England it is said, the heiress of some property had occasion from time to time to consult a lawyer, who was one of the trustees of the property, though not much older than herself, on matters of business. The lawyer wholly engrossed with his profession, listened to her politely at these interviews, answered her briefly, and that was all.

At length she came to him one day to consult him about an offer of marriage which had been made to her. He heard her story, his attention being half occupied all the time by some papers on the desk before him that he was arranging. As soon as she had finished he paused a moment from his work, put himself into an attitude of reflection, and said, unassumingly:

"Well! Yes! Marriage is certainly an important subject, and everybody must think of it some time or other. I suppose, though I have never thought of it particularly, that the young lady he asked her if she was particularly interested in the young gentleman who had proposed to her. She said she was not."

"Well then," said he, "if you have a fancy for being married, here am I. If you think you could be comfortable and happy with me, I am at your service. Think of it."

The lady said she could think of it, and retired, while the lawyer returned to the work of arranging his papers. A month afterwards they were married.

On the subject of the fate of the disappointed author is silent.

The story is an English story. The next is a French one.

A young lady, wealthy, beautiful, and accomplished, went to Paris to see the Exposition and the other wonders of the place. She had a male protector. As it is understood that you can procure anything you wish for in Paris, she determined to provide herself with one.

A week or two after this an intelligent and handsome young salesman in one of the principal "magazines" had his attention attracted by a very charming young lady who came in several days in succession to make some purchases, and always came to his counter, where she usually held more conversation with him than the business strictly required. At length, one day when she had made some purchases, she asked him if he would do her the favor to come himself with the messenger who should bring the articles as she wished to see him on some private business; and she gave her address.

When he came she received him as a friend, and told him in the course of the interview that she had come to Paris to see the Exposition, but she had no male protector, in consequence of which she was greatly restricted in her movements, and subjected to much inconvenience. What she proposed to him was that he should enter into her service as her brother during the two months of her stay. She had selected him, she said, after some considerable quiet observation about the town among the gentlemen to whom she thought that such a proposal could properly be made. If he accepted her offer she would make him an ample compensation for the loss of his situation, and for the time that would be required for him to find another.

The gentleman said he would accept the offer, and he was accordingly engaged on both sides. For two months the lady enjoyed the countenance and protection of her temporary brother, who came every morning to attend her in her visits to the Exposition, and to the various public monuments of Paris, and in the evening to the opera and the theatres. He was a young man of fine personal appearance and agreeable manners, and he faithfully confined his attentions within the limits prescribed by his employer. At the end of the time the lady expressed herself well satisfied with the manner in which he had performed his duties, and took leave of him—putting into his hands, at the same time, a packet which he, on subsequently opening, found to contain notes of the Bank of France to an amount sufficient to indemnify him ten times over for the temporary loss of his usual employment.

The next day the lady left Paris by the morning train for Brest, where she was to take passage by the steamer for her native land. We can not unfortunately determine from this circumstance what her native land was, inasmuch as not only the American steamers, but also those bound to other destinations sail from Brest, and take passengers to all parts of the civilized world.

On the morning of the day following, as the lady was entering the carriage that was to take her to the quay she received a package by express from Paris. On opening it she found that it contained a casket of jewelry, consisting of diamonds of great value. They were from her "brother." He had invested the whole sum she had given him in this way.

She was touched with the delicacy which her companion had manifested in retaining the value in this form instead of refusing to receive it when it was offered to him, and with the feeling on his part toward herself which his action denoted, that she gave up her voyage, returned to Paris, and sought the gentleman to thank him for his present.

In about a month they too were married.

These two stories are both in some measure characteristic of the manners and usages of the respective countries in which they are said to have occurred.

He Wouldn't Go In.

The Cincinnati Enquirer tells the following story:

Some time since a newly wedded couple from the interior of the State arrived at the Burnett House, and took apartments for the night at that well-known hotel. It was not familiar with the metropolitan sights. The rooms, corridors, marble floor and gorgeous drawing-room and well spread table of the hotel drew from them the most ingenious remarks of surprise. In the evening they visited the opera house, and were so astonished at its magnificent interior that even Mr. Walker's wonderful impersonation of "Macbeth" almost failed to interest them. Nothing more was thought of the verdant pair till about one o'clock in the morning, at which time the back door of the Burnett House, in making his customary rounds, observed the Benedict seated in the hall near the door of his room.

He raised the latch of the door, and found the Benedict seated in the hall near the door of his room. He raised the latch of the door, and found the Benedict seated in the hall near the door of his room.

Nomination of State Officers.

The selection of Thomas Hubbard, of the Logan County Gazette, for Secretary of State, is one of the best nominations that could be made. He is a glorious good fellow—editors one of the best papers in the State, and as a writer, scholar, gentleman, can no more be best than he for the office to which he is nominated.

For Supreme Judge, Hon. William E. Fink, of Perry, is a nomination eminently fit to be made. He is a sound lawyer, and will make a Judge that will do credit to the bench of Ohio.

For member of the Board of Public Works, Arthur Hughes, of Cleveland, who was on the last Democratic ticket, is again the nominee. But few men in Ohio, from an intimate knowledge of the public works of the State, and the interest of those doing business on the canals, and with them the interest of the State, that Mr. Hughes does; and glad are we again to see his name on the ticket for an office the duties of which he is so peculiarly qualified to perform.

For Commissioner of Common Schools, Mr. Kirkwood, of Seneca, as one who would fill the office wisely and well, received the nomination over a host of worthy competitors. He is a gentleman whose heart is in the education of the masses, and with him to so advance the educational interest of the masses will be a labor of love.

For Clerk of the Supreme Court, John W. Webb, of Mahoning, is the nominee. Mr. Webb is an editor—fully competent to fill the duties of the office, and in character and ability is the peer of any man the Republicans dare nominate against him.

The ticket throughout is an excellent one. With it we are ready for the battle, and as the old Scotch chieftain said to the enemy of his country, we say to the Radical leaders:

"Upon me, and do your worst, And fight him that bleeds first."

Noteman.

STATE CONVENTION.

Never in the palmiest days of the Democracy, nor in the times when her cause was never overruled by the hands of aristocratic power, did the gallant old party, always true to itself and to its principles, as they were ever true to the country, send up as large a fine looking or as able delegations as that which on the 8th of January, 1868, in State Convention assembled.

From all parts of the State, the different delegations were composed of picked men, and when they stood in the Athenaeum, a noble looking band of patriots was never before seen in Ohio's Capital. Old faces were recognized, when younger than now, were seen in the days of Jackson, sustaining the old Patriot in his fierce contest with the Bank of the United States, and with them as Delegates, their sons, who had been trained up in the way they should go, and when old departed not from the political principles which alone can save the Republic.

These who expected an outbreak and came, glorifying to see Capital city, to see the light on the Senatorial question, were disappointed. The Democracy have no time to quarrel now. They are striking for their country and the perpetuity of the Union—for the Constitution as it was framed by the Fathers—for equal and exact justice to all—for an economical Government and just taxation. These accomplished, they will be well paid for their labor of years.

The platform adopted is a noble embodiment of principles that must commend it to all who love their country and its once free institutions. With it, and with the excellent ticket nominated, success in Ohio is as certain as the sun rises, on the 23rd Tuesday of October next, and with the gallant, stand-out Fenelon as the National standard-bearer, the Union will be saved, and the Democracy again, as in times past, administer the Government wisely, economically and well.

Let the Democracy now perfect their organization. Each man should remember that if he has but one day or one hour to live, that day or hour should be devoted to the country. We strike to save the Republic and to make Ohio permanently Democratic, and it can and will be done.—State-man.

FINE HOODS.—No slaughtering is about closed in this city. Some very fine hood have been packed here during the season. John Glick packed one hundred head, and by Wm. Fleming, Esq., of Wagon Creek, this country, which averaged 240 lbs. each. Mr. Fleming is in the stock business. He fed 135 head of cattle, last winter, 52 head of which were shipped to New York, by Taggart & Noyes, and wholesaled at $170 per head. The New York Tribune, in noticing this lot of cattle, said Mr. Fleming was one of the best stockmen and feeders in the country.—Circleville Dem.

A DAY or two since, in one of the trains from Dayton, a quiet individual, sitting by the stove in one of the passenger cars, drew forth a bottle and commenced laying his hands with the contents. The
